How companies can verify identities

These companies can use their own data, and they can access data like credit records. They're able to check that information from passports and driving licences is correct.

Certified companies meet government privacy standards, so you can trust them with your personal information. They won't share or sell your data for any other purposes without your consent.

There won't be any effect on your credit score.

More than one certified company means you choose who verifies your identity, and it means the system overall is stronger.
