“Digital identification can play an important role in achieving the sustainable development goals,” said UN Deputy-Secretary-General Amina Mohammed. “It can enable the world’s poorest and most vulnerable people to gain access to critical services, from education to healthcare and financing, while also advancing their legal and political rights. We look to this advisory council to help ensure that no one is left behind in the digital age.”
OUR TEAMS SHOULD BE AS DIVERSE AS THE PROBLEMS THEY ARE TRYING TO SOLVE
Vision

Digital identity solutions built for everyone are built by everyone.
Mission

To inspire, elevate and support a more diverse workforce in the digital identity industry.
What We Do

- Women in Identity champions identity from the perspective of encouraging a more diverse workforce in the identity industry, inclusive of all, to enter and work in the identity industry.
- Highlight and elevate the talented people who already do great work, but who might not be represented equally across the industry.
- Fostering new relationships and mentorship between a diverse group in different areas of the industry.
- Create opportunities for more diverse representation at industry events across gender, age, ethnicity, sexual orientation and social status, both as speakers and attendees.
- Provide access to useful research and training around diversity and inclusion and its importance in the identity industry.
- Women In Identity will accomplish its aims through communication, open and informative networking events across the world, and a collaborative environment in order to achieve the collective aims of its members.
